Exhibition Description

Roll On Columbia: Exploring the Landscape and Culture of the Columbia River Treaty explores the complex legacy of the 50 year-old Columbia River Treaty. With the treaty up for possible renewal or renegotiation in the near future, the exhibition provides present-day understanding of the region's trans-boundary watershed ecosystem, a vast landscape draining water from B.C.'s Rocky Mountains to Astoria, Oregon.

Winner of the Canadian Museum association award of excellence and funded by the Columbia Basin Trust and FortisBC, the exhibition explores the local and national controversy over a treaty that authorized four mega projects for flood control and increased hydro-power efficiencies, but also negatively impacted ecosystems and human communities without local consultation.

Guest-curated by Eileen Delehanty Pearkes, the exhibition contains historical information panels, a seldom-heard master recording of a local protest folk song by Skip Fraser and Joe Irving, artwork by Heather MacAskill (BC) and Mary Babcock (Hawaii) and various historical artifacts related to human culture in the upper Columbia Basin.
